MEMORANDUM FOR: Director, FBIS

THROUGH : Chief, Operations Group

SUBJECT : Monthly Report--Swaziland Bureau--December 1985

I. GENERAL

1. Cable of Thanks --The bureau received a cable of thanks from the Embassy in Pretoria for "your outstanding labors and responsiveness to embassy and Washington needs. We are on a daily basis impressed with your prompt and professional processing of the plethora of topical press and broadcast materials from and about South Africa. Your attentiveness to our special requests is also very much appreciated," the cable said.

2. New Staff Slot --The Ambassador and the Director FBIS have approved another staff editor slot for the bureau to enable it to extend operating hours to Saturday and Sunday evenings. Permission is awaited from the Swazi Interior Ministry for this and an additional teletypist slot.

II. OPERATIONS

A. Editorial/Monitorial

1. On 3 December, SAPA reported that South African President P. W. Botha had lifted the state of emergency in eight districts. BBC expressed thanks for the report: "Twenty three minutes only separate your receipt time and the time of our supply of world service which used it as a monitoring exclusive. An outstanding piece of work from news bureau's viewpoint."

2. The bureau has made a number of changes in response to consumer feedback gathered and forwarded by LRB and DRD. First, it began adding short headlines to separate items in its well-received press review. Second, it began filing more economic material from all sources but particularly from the press, which carries a considerable amount of such material. Third, it began filing the weekly "Apartheid Barometer" column from the WEEKLY MAIL, the successor of the now defunct RAND DAILY MAIL. Fourth, it has marginally increased coverage of specific political topics, particularly on the school boycotts, although for months a very low threshold on political reporting has been maintained. The bureau was able to give a quick response to one analyst question of considerable interest: whether South Africa would extend its debt repayment freeze.

Only a few days after the feedback was received, SAPA carried an embargoed announcement that the freeze had been extended until 31 March. The item was filed immediate.

3. Two explosions killing and wounding innocent people caused an outcry in South Africa--and a possible military response. On the 16th, Johannesburg Radio reported that six people had been killed in landmine explosions near Messina, for which the ANC subsequently claimed credit. South Africa protested vehemently to Zimbabwean officials, but despite veiled threats, did not carry out any raid into that country. On the 20th, however, SAPA reported that nine South Africans, believed to be political refugees and ANC members, had been killed in an attack which the Lesotho Government charged was carried out by South African commandoes. Although South African authorities refused to admit responsibility, the RSA State Security Council met that evening and issued a warning that despite repeated warnings to neighboring governments, including Swaziland, ANC elements were continuing to operate from their territories and the South African Government considered the attitude of these countries to be "unsatisfactory." It pledged to protect its borders and people "by all appropriate means." Three days later a bomb exploded in a white shopping center near Durban, killing five Christmas shoppers and injuring many. The ANC declined to make any statement accepting or denying responsibility for the attack but South African officials and observers feel it was the beginning of ANC attacks against "soft targets."

4. On the 22nd, police forced Mrs. Winnie Mandela, wife of imprisoned ANC leader Nelson Mandela, out of her Soweto home after Law and Order Minister Le Grange announced that her banning order had been modified, that she would not have to return to the small Orange Free State town to which she had been banished, but that she could not live in the Johannesburg area. Mrs. Mandela defied the ban and returned to her home, and was promptly arrested. However, SAPA reported on the 23rd that she had been released without bail and had flown to Cape Town to visit her husband for the holidays. Afterwards, however, she vowed to return to again defy the government ban on her living in Johannesburg.

5. The bureau's Portuguese section was more heavily worked than it has been in recent months when major gatherings were held by both Angola and Mozambique. On the 3rd, Angolan President Dos Santos read a party report opening the MPLA-Labor Party Second Congress which was four and a half hours long and was carried in installments on Luanda Radio. The bureau, which maintained an open watch on the radio throughout, excerpted the speech in ten takes, processed two other Dos Santos speeches connected with the occasion, and also texted many of the messages brought by other delegations, including some from a number of prominent Communist countries as well as from African countries and organizations. Extremely poor reception hampered much of the work and prevented processing of a fair amount of material, although the Angolans made things worse by reading the translation while the speeches were going on so that the original and translation were so intermixed that processing was impossible. On the 13th, Mozambique began holding the 14th session of the People's Assembly, which President Samora Machel opened in a 90-minute speech which the bureau excerpted in four takes.

IV. VISITS

To The Bureau:

A Headquarters safety inspector visited the bureau during the month to test safety aspects of the asbestos ceilings which are in portions of the bureau and the residences.

V. COMMUNITY AFFAIRS

STAT
The bureau's admin assistant, [ ], and the bureau chief crewed on the only women's raft to be entered in the annual Greater Usutu raft race held in Big Bend, Swaziland during the month. The women's team finished ninth overall in the 12-kilometer race involving some 20 rafts, and would have finished even sooner had the experienced men's teams been gentlemanly enough to warn them which side of the rapids to avoid so as not to get hung up on the rocks. Local rumor had it that four dogs had been lost to crocodiles in the river the previous week, but no crocs were sighted, though much in mind, as part of the race involved pushing the rafts over shallow sand banks.
